THE PENALTY IN JAIL FOR MILITIA FINES.

THE PENALTY IN JAIL FOR MILITIA FINES.

The man who claims to be Francis Heilmann, and who says he was arrested on a warrant issued against John Heilmann, was found at Ludlow Street Jail yesterday. He says that he has belonged to the 11th Regiment himself for a number of years, but several months ago he met with an accident by which he lost most of the fingers of his left hand. Since he has recovered, he has not attended drill, being told that he was disabled and therefore exempt. He declares further that he saw the Marshal chase the name John and substitute his own. The Marshal claimed that Francis Heilmann also was indebted for fines.

There are confined in the County Jail three or four other men who have been arrested and imprisoned for the non-payment of regimental dues. The Warden states that there is usually about that number under his charge. The men at present confined are all members of the 11th Regiment, and all claim to have joined without understanding the penalties that were attached to the non-performance of their duties. One of them, Isaac Bay, said that he had been out with a friend one Sunday, and after they had been drinking a number of times, his friends took him to the office of some officer and induced him to sign the bill. He had been away and was unable to attend to the bill, and could not pay the fines they were imposed.

F. J. Lohr, another of those confined, claimed that he was not even a citizen and had not taken the oath of allegiance to the United States. He was in the regiment three or four years ago, but had lately had some employment that kept him at a distance and prevented his attendance on drill, and being unable to pay them he was confined for twenty days.

Adolph Stern, of Company E, said that about three years ago he had been induced to join the company. He was then a young man, and never received the consent of his parents to his action, but he was received without difficulty. His employment lately had been such a nature as to prevent his attending to the drill, and he was fined $25. He was then confined for twenty days.

The Warden of the jail said that most of those who came there for non-payment of dues were offenders who had been imprisoned once for the same offense, and who seemed rather to enjoy jail life. There might be, he thought, some who were in the county for the first time.

Judge-Advocate Horatio C. King was asked whether much hardship did arise from the rules now in force as to the imprisonment of militia men. He said that he had been induced to join the militia without a sufficient knowledge of the penalties which they would suffer if they failed to attend at drill. He said that such cases were frequent. His own practice, he said, had been when presiding at courts-martial to have the delinquent rendered his excuse, and to learn from the captain what the character of the accused man was before he accepted or rejected the excuse. If the man was a soldier, he was released from the militia, and if he was a civilian, he was released from the militia.

Major King handed to the court a list of twenty-five cases of delinquency can usually be disposed of in an hour. The rule of the code as to imprisonment for non-payment of dues was, he said, "The jailer should be a delinquent closely confined without bail two days for any fine or penalty not exceeding $2; and two additional days for every dollar above that sum, and jailer's fees, be sooner paid; but no such imprisonment shall extend beyond the period of twenty days. No property shall be exempt from the payment of such fines and penalties."

A MASON'S FUNERAL.

THE TROUBLE IN THE SEVENTH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH—DIFFERENT VIEWS OF THE MATTER.

The trouble regarding the funeral of William A. Van Dorn, which was to have taken place on Wednesday, from the Seventh Presbyterian Church, at Broome and Ridge-sts., is still the subject of discussion. Several prominent members of the church deny that there was any intention on the part of the pastor, the Rev. Henry T. Hunter, to refuse the use of the church because the deceased was to be buried with Masonic ceremonies. On the other hand, A. J. Case, the undertaker who was in charge, and Theodore B. Case, the sexton of the church, maintain that Mr. Hunter refused to give his consent to speaking the church. Francis S. Gardner, secretary of the Board of Trustees, who has been a member of the church twenty-four years, said yesterday:

"There is no opposition in the church. One of the members of the Session, and several members of the Board of Trustees, including myself, are Masons. Had Mr. Hunter been consulted before he refused to give his consent, he would have made the least objection. It is considered by many members of the church that much of the difficulty was occasioned by Mr. Case, who was formerly the sexton of the church. Since his removal about a year ago he has had considerable feeling against the pastor and some of the members of the congregation. After a meeting of the trustees, a number of the members of the church, including myself, denounced him as the cause of the trouble. It has been alleged that there is opposition in the church to Mr. Hunter. This is not true. The dissatisfaction is confined to a few low and fanatical members of the church. This trouble will only serve to unite the pastor and his people more closely together."

S. S. Smith, another member of the church, said: "Mr. Hunter has made no remarks in the church, but the notices of the funeral were read, but they were general, and referred to the importance of funeral notices being sent in early. He also cited a passage from the Bible, and said that the funeral was a duty of the church. He said that he was a Mason, and that the congregation was divided several of the elders inquired who had given authority to open the church for the funeral. He said that he was a Mason, and that the congregation was divided several of the elders inquired who had given authority to open the church for the funeral. He said that he was a Mason, and that the congregation was divided several of the elders inquired who had given authority to open the church for the funeral."

The undertaker, who was employed by the Van Dorn family, is A. J. Case, whose place of business is at No. 379 Grand-st. His version of the matter is in direct disagreement with those already given. Mr. Van Dorn, he said, died on Friday morning. As soon as I received word of his death I wrote out the notice and went to see the trustees of the Seventh Presbyterian Church. Three of the trustees gave their consent, but the others considered it unnecessary to go further. The notice was given to the sexton, who took it at once to the pastor. He said that he was a Mason, and that the congregation was divided several of the elders inquired who had given authority to open the church for the funeral. He said that he was a Mason, and that the congregation was divided several of the elders inquired who had given authority to open the church for the funeral."

Mr. Hunter is very reticent regarding the affair, and claims that the difficulty arose entirely through a misapprehension.

A SURPRISED BURGLAR.

JUMPING THROUGH A WINDOW TO ESCAPE AN IRISH SERVANT.

Bridget Reilly, the cook in the house of E. Buckley, at No. 37 Clinton-st., Brooklyn, awoke early yesterday morning, and finding that it was later than it really was, went downstairs to look at the clock in the basement. Striking a match, she discovered her mistake, and was about to retire for another nap, when she saw a man standing near her, with a hat concealing his face. The match went out, leaving her in the dark, paralyzed for a moment with terror. Suddenly the robber sprang upon her, and striking her in the face with his fist, turned and jumped through a window, shivering the heavy plate glass. The servant immediately found her way upstairs and aroused Mr. Buckley, who quickly brought Captain Leary, with all his reserves, to the spot. After thoroughly searching the neighborhood, they returned, not having found a trace of the thief.

COMMISSIONER CAMPBELL'S PLANS.

Mr. Campbell, Commissioner of Public Works, said yesterday to a Tribune reporter, that the most important works which would engage the attention of his Department this season as the Spring opened, were the repairs of the Croton Aqueduct, the construction of a new conduit from the Bronx River, and the repairing of the streets. The appropriation for the repairs of the Aqueduct for the present year is $250,000, and this, with a similar amount next year, he thought, would suffice to put the Aqueduct in good condition.

The Department engineers are now engaged in the details of the plan for the reconstruction of the Croton Aqueduct. The work will be finished in two or three years, and will increase the water supply about 20,000,000 gallons daily. If an adjacent tract of land, owned by the city, and which has been the subject of a lawsuit, had the effect of preventing water. The total number now in use is about 1,400. Early in February, Commissioner Campbell will be to the Board of Aldermen, with a list of the lands which he has been asked to acquire for the purpose of preventing water. His wishes in this respect were fully carried out. Colonel Abraham Bailey, another veteran, then said: "Major Crowley and myself fought side by side at Landy's Lane and in several other battles; and I must say that of all the brave men I have ever known, I have none so brave as Major Crowley. He was the hero of Landy's Lane. There are but three of the old veterans here to-day besides myself, and we are to say I expected to see Major Crowley here to-day. He was the hero of Landy's Lane. There are but three of the old veterans here to-day besides myself, and we are to say I expected to see Major Crowley here to-day."

Only four of the veterans of 1812 were present. They were Colonel Abraham Bailey, Captain Samuel Ryckman, Captain Morris, and Major Richard Brown. Major Crowley's nephews, John P. Feltow, of Maidenhead, and John P. Feltow, of Troy, were also present. At 1:50 the coffin was placed in the hearse and proceeded to Greenwood Cemetery, where it will be interred in a private lot belonging to his family.
